Chapter 1 by Ravenisk

I awoke to the smell of fresh, succulent spring crops growing.

Moving had been great yesterday. I had met all the people in Sunshine Valley. All of them seemed kind and were enjoying living in this small village. There seemed to be liveliness in the air that no other place could fake. On this same day, I moved into Sunshine Valley's 'mountain range' to start my new job as Farmer Summer Levoise. It has a nice ring to it. Today's my first day on the job of becoming an actual farmer, so I woke up joyful. I was told that I was going to be living with my tutor until I could get a house of my own. She was a kind lady that treated me well. During my first lesson, Mrs. Willow explained the basics, "Okay now start making those dirt patches with the how I gave you." As I began to get into my work I came to understand that farming was hard work. You had to tend to your plants and animals everyday. After many hours of training passed, Mrs. Willow said, "You're done for the day, good work." I smiled and told her I was heading to town. As I was skipping to get to the path to town, I noticed a sprout and I felt happy all over again.
